LABELING REQUIREMENT FOR ADVERTISING TOYS AND GAMES

The Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) issued a final ruling in 2008 regarding the labeling of certain toys and games in catalogs and other printed materials. This ruling is effective for all such materials distributed on or after August 9, 2009. While the ruling provides an exemption for catalogs that are distributed solely between businesses, we felt it would be best to be cautious and follow the ruling with our 2009 Q4 Assortment Catalog.

Below you will find six different warnings listed as Note 1, Note 2,... and Note 6. Certain products will have a warning statement preceded by a symbol representing an exclamation point inside a triangle. There will be references to the Notes on this page in that warning statement as shown by the example here:

CHOKING HAZARD (1,2). Not for under 8 yrs.

In this example, this product is referencing Note 1 and Note 2. It also states the age requirement for the particular product. Each product could have one or more Notes associated with it.

NOTE 1:

WARNING:

CHOKING HAZARD - - Small parts
Not for children under 3 yrs.

NOTE 2:

WARNING:

can finally have the web you want
in the size you want

Finally, you can have the Internet experience you've been waiting for on your phone. There's stuff you'd expect, like email, and things you might not expect, like cinematic visuals, Google Maps,™ and HTC's FriendStream which brings all your contacts and live updates together in one place. The best part? It's all still small enough to fit in your front pocket.
